Dear John

Thanks for your letter and I am delighted that you and Jenny have settled so happily in France. It sounds enviable. I have not sent you Mark's obituary notices because Michael Warren tells me he has already sent them to you.

I am afraid it was me who suggested that you should be contacted by The Guardian but in any event their obituary was reasonable. It is always so difficult trying to fit a person's life into a thousand words or so. I did The Times's obituary for John Boreham who died recently and found it one of the most difficult things to write that I have ever undertaken.

Do get in touch if you are ever back in the Mother-country.

Yours sincerely
